RUSSIANS RECOVERING FROM RECENT REVERSES

Ground Taken by Austro-German Forces Have Been Recaptured

HIGH WATER MARK OF DEFENSE REACHED

Petrograd Reports That Fighting Has Been Going on Without Cessation and That the Tide of Battle Has Ebbed and Flowed Vigorously—One Hill Taken and Retaken Three Times, But is Now in the Hands of the Russians—Reported Russian Reverses Said to Have Been "Grossly Exaggerated."

(By United Press)

London, May 5—The Russians are recovering the ground recently ceded to the Austro-German forces at several points along the battle lines near Courland and the south side of the Carpathians, according to Petrograd despatches. The high water mark of the defense of the Teuton was reached when they crossed the Donjee river.

"Grossy Exaggerated"

Between Tuchow and Bietz the Austrians have been almost entirely replaced by the Germans. Fighting has passed and repassed over the same territory, one hill being taken three different times, but last time was held by the Russians. German claims of sweeping victories are gross exaggerations."

The Russian Black sea fleet continues to bombard Cetahaija.

British Troops Advance

British troops are now advancing into the interior of the Gallipoli peninsula, according to an official statement issued in London last evening. The statement follows:

"During the night of the 1st 2d of May and the night of the 2d 3d the enemy launched strong and determined attacks in mass against our positions, constantly bringing up fresh troops.

"Not only did the allies repulse every attack, inflicting enormous losses on the enemy, but we assumed the offensive, drove the enemy out of their positions and are now advancing into the interior of the peninsula."

Bombardment is Resumed

Athens, May 5—(via London)—The bombardment of the Turkish forts on the Gulf of Smyrna has been resumed, according to messages reaching here from Mitylone and the warships of the allies contiue their lively shelling of the forts of the Dardanelles.

The allies are reported to have effected a landing near the site of the ancient Ephesus, a location 35 miles south-southeast of Smyrna.

Her huband told her he would light the lamp and try to do something for her, but after getting the lamp lit and turning to the bed he found his wife dead.

Mrs. Shaw was born ... years of age and was the sister of ... Hartshorn who was at one time cashier of a Clearfield bank. She was married several years. Her mother is still living.

Funeral arrangements later.

Important Meeting of Elk Hose Company

There will be an important meeting of the Elk hose company at the hose house this evening at 8 o'clock and every member is requested to be present. Among other matters to be discussed is the ... discussion of the proposition ... chemical ... wagon ... the ... firemen.

The ... firemen believe they have a strong claim upon the public in the fact that the water pressure in that end of town is ... low at present and in the event of fire the chemical wagon would be of great help ... the flames as the chemicals could be applied as soon as the wagon reached the scene.

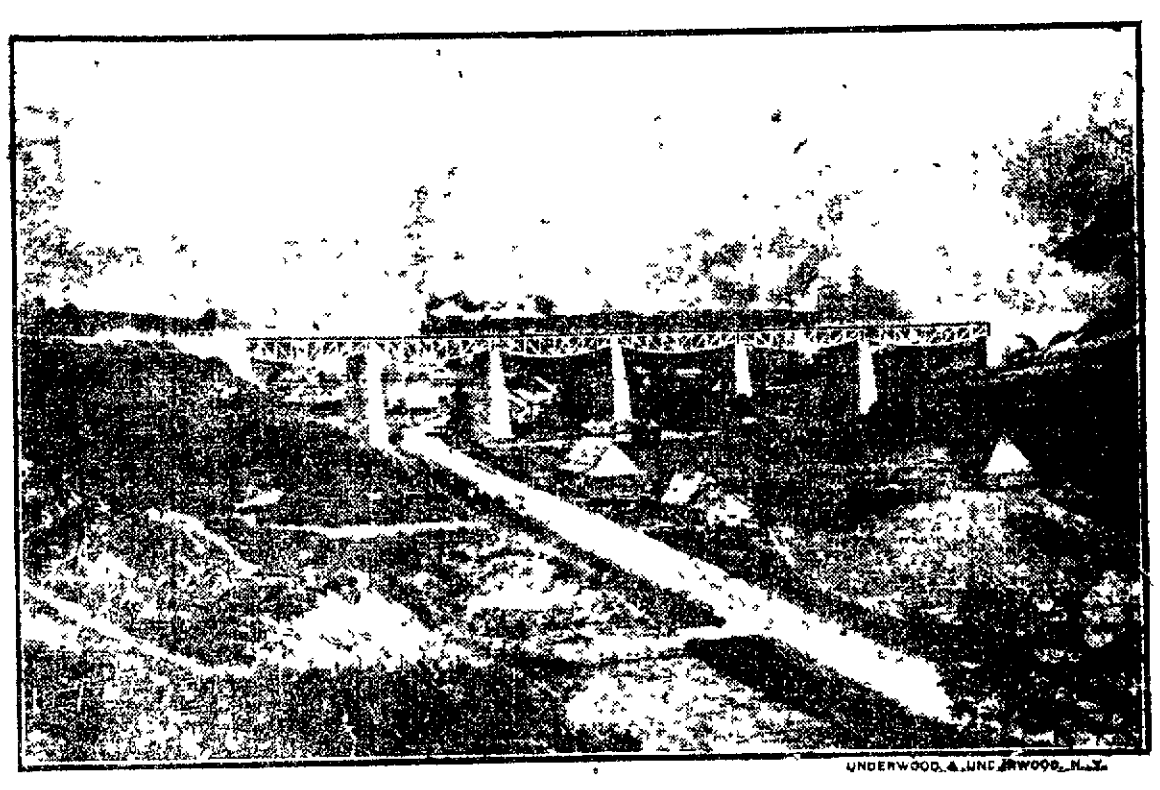

In another part of this paper will be found the program of events scheduled to take place at the driving park on Saturday under the auspices of the Elk hose company and the friends of the company and citizens generally are urged to patronize this entertainment, the net proceeds of which will be set aside for the benefit of the auto chemical wagon fund.

CLEARFIELD NOT A SPOTLESS TOWN YET BUT IS IMPROVING

Board of Health Commends the Citizens For Cleaning Up Their Premises

There Are Some Property Owners and Tenants Who Have not Obeyed the Order of the Board, and These Will be Attended to After the Health Officer Has Investigated.

Clearfields board of health has issued the following statement, in which it expresses gratification over the fact that many citizens promptly obeyed the order to clean up their premises. While Clearfield is not yet the spotless town it can and should be made, there is a noticeable improvement of conditions and this improvement will be greater after the heath officer has made a thorough investigation of all premises and has carried out its order against those citizens who have not yet complied with the order. The board's statement follows:

Clean up days were unusually successful this year. Those residing within the borough limits have for the most part complied with the wishes of the board of health. There are always some disgruntled persons who take great pleasure in antagonizing all progressive movements. The campaign of education begun five years ago is yielding more and more fruit each year. The clean-up work is only getting under way and those who have not yet complied with the order will have the pleasure of having the work done for them at their own expense.

Keep in mind the fact that the health office will now begin an exhaustive study of sanitary conditions existing on every property in town. If you have a bad stable clean it up; if the plumbing is not right have it repaired. All out-closets existing on streets with sewers must be removed at once and replaced with sanitary closets. Clean up and keep clean.

When you find it necessary to eat refreshments on the streets have pride enough in your town to throw the fruit skins and peanut hulls in the receptacles provided by the borough fathers. Boost your town by cleaning up and keeping clean.

The board of health wishes to thank the ministers of the town who encouraged their parishioners to clean up their own properties and the borough generally. Also the Y. M. C. A., Womans club, the Chamber of Commerce, the daily papers and the borough ... for ... sentiment they have helped to create for a Cleaner ... Greater Clearfield.

New Fishing Code Changes Trout Law

The new fishing code before the legislature classifies the game, food and bait fishes of the commonwealth and provide that game fish may be taken only with rod, hook and line, with not more than three hooks to a line during the open season. Bait fish may be taken at any time with hook and line, or with minnow traps or dip nets not over three feet square, and food fish may be taken with hook and line and outline at any time of the year. All other methods of taking fish from the public waters are forbidden.

The trout season is left as it is, but the size limit is abolished and a creel limit of 40 is established, it being made illegal to return to the water any trout that has been hooked.

Thousands of dollars worth of fertilizer goes to waste in the river at this place every day in the shape of the filth which passes down the river

We humbly suggest that the borough councilmen and the officers of the Chamber of Commerce get together and agree upon a program having for its purpose the betterment of general conditions in Clearfield

Wouldn't it be a good idea for the firemen who are collecting funds for chemical auto wagons to have several companies bring machines here and give exhibitions in order that the citizens may see just what it is proposed to procure? This would also prevent any one company from getting in a little quiet work on the side.

WILD LIFE LEAGUES

The Progress is not opposed to the formation of sportsmen's associations This paper has urged the hunters and fishermen to organize for the purpose of improving conditions in this state relative to game animals and fish That game and fish are fast disappearing in Pennsylvania cannot be denied and true sportsmen ought to combine to put a stop to the wanton slaughter of game birds and the dynamiting and netting of trout streams; to encourage the propagation of game birds and animals and to demand of the state that the money paid into the state treasury shall be used in restocking woods and streams

But the Progress has no faith in the purpose of the men who are going about the state organizing Wild Life leagues Back of the leagues is the secretary of the state game commission, under whose administration game has almost completely disappeared from the state, and through whose activities the true sportsman has been bidden from the woods and his place taken by the pot hunter and the game hog In the opinion of many hunters, the object of Secretary Kalbfus in forming Wild Life leagues is to have under his thumb an organization which will be of assistance in his program of providing amusement to the game hogs of the big cities

If the secretary of the state game commission were to exert himself and expend some of the money at his command in restocking the forests with game birds he would serve a much larger number of hunters than he is now catering to what with his ... nial invitation to the ... ers to invade ... ter the ... the w... of th... was establish ...

the state in which these relics of bygone days still exist ask the taxpayers of all of the other counties to help pay for ... toll roads ... to provide these eastern counties want to get rid of their toll roads let them do it at their own expense as the other counties did and not ask the state to pay the bill

It is proposed to take from the state highway fund the money which would be needed to pay for these toll roads, thus reducing those funds to the amount of nearly one hundred thousand dollars, money which is needed to improve the roads throughout the state It is nothing short of insolence on the part of the few eastern counties—rich counties too—to ask the state to buy the toll roads which pleasure-seeking aubomotilists and others in that part of the state wish to have removed The removal of these toll roads would not benefit anybody outside of the counties interested

OUR NAVY

In these days of turmoil it is gratifying to know that according to Secretary Daniels, of the American navy, this branch of the government is stronger than ever and that it is fully competent to deal with the navies of the world, even if these should be combined against the United States Secretary Daniels declares emphatically that the guns now being placed on warships of the United States will "shoot farther, shoot straighter and shoot harder" than those in use by any other nation

The report that Secretary Daniels contemplates strengthening the American navy by buying up some of the old canal boats abandoned when the Pennsylvania canal was gobbled by the Pennsylvania railroad, arming them with the guns captured during the Mexican and Civil wars and using them to patrol the American coasts, that he plans to convert oil tanks used on railroads as torpedo boat destroyers, and that he will run his warships with sails instead of by steam are probaby founded on fiction, but when the United States must depend upon a landlubber to run its navy almost any innovation may be anticipated The fact of the matter is that the American navy is not as big nor as efficient as it ought to be, and this is due to the Democratic policy of blundering

THE RED CROSS NURSE

The country lanes are stained with red
More scarlet than the kiss of frost
And one leads from the fields of dead
Where raging battle lines are tossed
Above the screaming shrapnel's rain
It flees the horror of the plain

The fragrant hill of dusky green
Enfolds its path with pitying leaves,
Compassionate the dim woods lean
As the pale moon her magic weaves
Compassionate the gray church waits,
A crypt of peace within her gates

Along the faintly echoing aisles
The stricken lie in silent lines,
Caressingly a woman smiles
Above them where the Red Cross shines
Sweet consolation's brimming bowl
She pours for every anguished soul

The facts about church membership are contained in United States census bulletin No 103 and the percentace of church membership in the total population is given for the year 1906 26 years after Kansas has become a prohibition state According to this tabulation, which is the latest obtainable, the lowest percentage of church membership was in Oklahoma, including Indian Territory, the rate being 18 2 The rate in New York was 43 7 in Pennsylvania, 43, in Illinois, 38 3 in Nebraska, 32 4 in Maine, 29 8 and in Kansas 28 4 Forty three states had a larger percentage of membership than had Kansas

CHAPTER XVII.

The professor roused himself from what had apparently been a very gloomy reverie.

"Well," he announced, "I must go home. It has been very kind of you, Mr. Quest, to keep me here for so long."

Quest glanced at the clock.

"Don't hurry, Mr. Ashleigh," he said. "We may get some news at any moment. French has a dozen men out on the search and he has promised to ring me up immediately he hears anything."

The professor sighed.

"A man," he declared, "who for twenty years can deceive his master so utterly and completely as Craig has done me, who is capable of such diabolical outrages, and who, when capture stares him in the face, is capable of an escape such as he made today, is outside the laws of probability. Personally, I do not believe that I shall ever again see the [illegible] of my servant, any more than [illegible] you. Quest, will entirely solve [illegible] mystery of these murders and [illegible] theft of the Rheinholdt jewels. What can we do against men who have revolving staircases and trolley-loads of river pirates waiting for them? You may be a scientific criminologist, Quest, but that fellow Craig is a scientific criminal, if ever there was one."

Quest crossed the room towards his cigar cabinet, and opened it. His little

start was apparent to both of them. Lenora laid down the bag which she had just lifted up. The professor leaned forward in his chair.

"What is it, Quest?" he demanded.

Quest stretched out his hand and picked up from the top of the cigars a small black box. He laid it on the table.

"Unless I am very much mistaken," he said, "it is another communication from our mysterious friend."

"Impossible!" the professor exclaimed hoarsely.

"How can he have been here?" Lenora cried.

Quest removed the lid from the box and drew out a circular card. Around the outside edge was a very clever pen and ink sketch of a lifebuoy, and inside the margin were several sentences of clear handwriting. In the middle was the signature "the clenched hands." Quest read the message aloud:

"In the great scheme of things, the Supreme Ruler of the universe divided an inheritance amongst his children. To one he gave power, to another strength, to another beauty, and to his favorite he gave cunning. They all looked at one another.

"What does it mean?" Lenora [illegible]

"A lifebuoy!" the professor murmured.

[illegible]

"Anything doing?" he asked.

Quest showed him the card and the sailing list.

The inspector glanced at the clock.

"Then we've got to make tracks," he declared, "and pretty quick, too. She'll be starting from somewhere about number twenty-eight dock, a long way down. Come along, gentlemen."

They hurried out to the automobile and started off for the docks. The latter part of their journey was accomplished under difficulties, for the street was packed with drays and heavy vehicles. They reached dock number twenty-eight at last, however, and hurried through the shed on to the wharf. There were no signs of a steamer there.

"Where's the Durham?" Quest asked one of the carters, who was just getting his team together.

The man pointed out to the middle of river, where a small steamer was lying.

"There she is," he replied. "She'll be off in a few minutes. You'll hear the sirens directly when they begin to move down."

Quest led the way quickly to the edge of the wharf. There was a small tug there, the crew of which were just making her fast for the night.

"Fifty dollars if you'll take us out to the Durham and catch her before she sails," Quest shouted to the man who seemed to be the captain.

They clambered down the iron ladder and jumped on to the deck of the tug. The captain seized the wheel. The two men who formed the crew took off their coats and waistcoats.

"Give it to her, Jim," the former ordered. "Now then, here goes! We'll just miss the ferry."

They swung around and commenced their journey. Quest stood with his watch in his hand. They were getting up the anchor of the Durham and from higher up the river came the screech of steamers beginning to move on their outward way.

"We'll make it all right," the captain assured them.

They were within a hundred yards of the Durham when Quest gave a little exclamation. From the other side of the steamer another tug shot out away, turning back towards New York. Huddled up in the stern, half concealed in a tarpaulin, was a man in a plain black suit. Quest, with a little shout, recognized the man at the helm from his long, brown beard.

"That's one of those fellows who was in the truck," he declared, "and that's Craig in the stern! We've got him this time. Say, captain, it's that tug I want. Never mind about the steamer. Catch it and I'll make it a hundred dollars!"

"We've got her!" he captain exclaimed. "There's the ferry and the first of the steamers coming down in the middle. They'll have to chuck it."

Right ahead of them, blazing with lights, a huge ferry came churning the river up and sending waves in their direction. On the other side, unnaturally large, loomed up the great bows of an ocean-going steamer. The tug was swung round and they ran up alongside. The man with the beard leaned over.

[illegible]

"Say, what's your trouble?" he demanded.

The inspector stepped forward.

"I want that man you've got under the tarpaulin," he announced.

"Say, you ain't the river police?"

"I'm Inspector French from headquarters," was the curt reply. "The sooner you hand him over, the better for you."

"Do you hear that, O'Toole?" the other remarked, turning around. "Get up, you blackguard!"

A man rose from underneath the oilskin. He was wearing Craig's clothes, but his face was the face of a stranger. As quick as lightning Quest swung round in his place.

"He's fooled us again!" he exclaimed. "Head her round, captain—back to the Durham!"

The sailor shook his head.

"We've lost our chance, guvnor," he pointed out. "Look!"

Quest set his teeth and gripped the inspector's arm. The place where the Durham had been anchored was empty. Already, half a mile down the river, with a trail of light behind and her siren shrieking, the Durham was standing out seawards.

Don't Neglect Your Eyes

Your eyes are your main support, therefore they should not be neglected in any way. The following are a few ways by which they are neglected more than any other way.

First You feel that you need glasses for your close work, yet, you neglect getting them examined and fitted with glasses. Another is that the glasses you are now wearing may not be the right focus for your eyes, yet you neglect getting them changed, or often your glasses become broken and you neglect getting them fixed as promptly as you should. Then again so many people are troubled with pain in the region of the eye ball or frequent headache which is very often caused through eye strain. Yet they neglect having them examined and find out whether or not glasses are needed.

Remember by neglect of these minor troubles serious trouble beyond all help often develops.

Therefore don't neglect your eyes, but call at our office Saturday May 8th, and have them examined.

Our examination is free, and make glasses as low as $1.00.

YUKON RIVER LITTLE KNOWN

Average American Unfamiliar With the Characteristics of the Great Alaskan Waterway.

The Yukon means so much as a waterway to Alaska that a report by the United States geological survey on its discharge at Eagle and on some of the great river's characteristics have especial interest. The Yukon is the fifth river in size in North America. It drains an area of 330,000 square miles and its length, including the Lewes and Teslin rivers, is 2,700 miles. The Mississippi-Missouri rivers are 6,000 miles long; the Mackenzie, 2,868; Colorado-Green, 2,000, and Ohio-Allegheny, 1,200.

The discharge of the Yukon varies from a maximum of 254,000 cubic feet a second to 10,100 cubic feet, average of 73,200. This discharge is relatively small compared with the average flow of the Mississippi, 695,000; Ohio, 300,000, and Colorado, 23,300. The Nile, with a drainage area of 1,262,000 square miles has an average flow of 116,000 cubic feet a second.

The comparatively small flow in relation to its drainage area is attributed to the fact that the interior of Alaska has the small rainfall characteristic of that portion of the United States that lies between the Rocky mountains and the Sierra Nevada north of the latitude of Salt Lake City.

The Yukon means so much to Alaska and the territory means so much to the United States in gold production and in other latent mineral and other development that the lack of general knowledge regarding its characteristic must be surprising to the sojourner in this country who comes from its banks.—New York

Showing Boys and Girls Their Work May Be Properly Described as the Divine Profession.

"There are no men nor women alive, of too deep visioning, nor of too lustrous a humanity, for the task of showing boys and girls their work. No other art answers so beautifully. This is the intense cultivation of the human spirit. This is world-parenthood, the divine profession.

"I would have my country call upon every man who shows vision and fineness in any work, to serve for an hour or two each day, among the schools of his neighborhood, telling the children the mysteries of his daily task—and watching for his own among them."

"There was an old priest who served men in Siberia. Around him, in that bleak winter land, were the best and worst of the Russian empire. He tended the sick, and prayed with them; brought food, cut wood, procured medicines, watched with the dying, prepared the dead. A certain young Red came out to the colony and observed the priest's manner of life.

"'Father,' he said, finally, 'I should think you would lose your soul in the midst of such misery and evil and darkness—as our life here is made of.'

"The old man leaned back and looked at the ceiling, shutting his eyes.

"'Well, now, that's queer,' he said, presently. 'I had almost forgotten that I had a soul.'"—Will Levington Comfort.

BENEFIT IN WAGGING EARS

Exercise Is Declared by Physicians to Have an Excellent Effect of the Hearing.

You will rarely find that a man who can wag his ears suffers from deafness. The reason for this is very simple. Wagging one's ears exercises them just as much as walking exercises the muscles of the legs. A great deal of deafness is caused by the muscles of the ears becoming stiff and refusing to respond quickly to the sound waves.

Quite a large proportion of children can move their ears, just as they can move the skin on their forehead up and down, but as they grow up they lose their power through want of practice. It is a mistake to let a child lose this power, for it may mean the difference between good and bad hearing in after years.

Dr. M. Fernet, the famous Paris doctor, has even gone so far as to suggest that people should be trained to wag their ears just as they are trained to exercise any other muscles of the body.

CLEARFIELD NOT A SPOTLESS TOWN YET BUT IS IMPROVING

Board of Health Commends the Citizens For Cleaning Up Their Premises

There Are Some Property Owners and Tenants Who Have not Obeyed the Order of the Board, and These Will be Attended to After the Health Officer Has Investigated.

Cearfields board of health has issued the following statement in which it expresses gratification over the fact that many citzens promptly obeyed the order to clean up their premises While Clearfield is not yet the spotless town it can and should be made, there is a noticeable improvement of conditions and this improvement will be greater after the heath officer has made a thorough investigation of all premises and has carried out its order against those citizens who have not yet complied with the order The board's statement follows.

Clean up days were unusually successful this year Those residing within the borough limits have for the most part complied with the wishes of the board of health There are always some disgruntled persons who take great pleasure in antagonizing all progressive movements. The campaign of education begun five years ago is yielding more and more fruit each year The clean-up work is only getting under way and those who have not yet complied with the order will have the pleasure of having the work done for them at their own expense

Keep in mind the fact that the health office will now begin an exhaustive study of sanitary conditions existing on every property in town If you have a bad stable clean it up if the plumbing is not right have it repaired All out-closets existing on streets with sewers must be removed at once and replaced with sanitary closets Clean up and keep clean

When you find it necessary to eat refreshments on the streets have pride enough in your town to throw the fruit skins and peanut hulls in the receptacles provided by the borough fathers Boost your town by cleaning up and keeping clean

The board of health wishes to thank the ministers of the town who encouraged their parishioners to clean up their own properties and the borough generally Also the Y M C A Womans club the Chamber of Commerce the daily papers and the borough council for ... sentiment they have helped to create for a Cleaner Better Clearfield

The Progress is an advertising medium has no equal in Clearfield county.

No town can be kept clean in which rubbish is swept from buildings into the street

The merchant who advertises in the Progress receives full value for the money he invests.

Thousands of dollars worth of fertilizer goes to waste in the river at this place every day in the shape of the filth which passes down the river

We humbly suggest that the borough councilmen and the officers of the Chamber of Commerce get together and agree upon a program having for its purpose the betterment of general conditions in Clearfield

Wouldn't it be a good idea for the firemen who are collecting funds for chemical auto wagons to have several companies bring machines here and give exhibitions in order that the citizens may see just what it is proposed to procure? This would also prevent any one company from getting in a little quiet work on the side.

WILD LIFE LEAGUES

The Progress is not opposed to the formation of sportsmen's associations. This paper has urged the hunters and fishermen to organize for the purpose of improving conditions in this state relative to game animals and fish. That game and fish are fast disappearing in Pennsylvania cannot be denied and true sportsmen ought to combine to put a stop to the wanton slaughter of game birds and the dynamiting and netting of trout streams; to encourage the propagation of game birds and animals and to demand of the state that the money paid into the state treasury shall be used in restocking woods and streams

But the Progress has no faith in the purpose of the men who are going about the state organizing Wild Life leagues. Back of the leagues is the secretary of the state game commission, under whose administration game has almost completely disappeared from the state, and through whose activities the true sportsman has been bidden from the woods and his place taken by the pot hunter and the game hog. In the opinion of many hunters, the object of Secretary Kalbfus in forming Wild Life leagues is to have under his thumb an organization which will be of assistance in his program of providing amusement to the game hogs of the big cities

If the secretary of the state game commission were to exert himself and expend some of the money at his command in restocking the forests with game birds he would serve a much larger number of hunters than he is now catering to what with his ... invitation to the ... ers to invade ... the ... the ... of ... was establish...

It is proposed to take from the state highway fund the money which would be needed to pay for these toll roads, thus reducing those funds to the amount of nearly one hundred thousand dollars, money which is needed to improve the roads throughout the state. It is nothing short of insolence on the part of the few eastern counties—rich counties too—to ask the state to buy the toll roads which pleasure-seeking automobilists and others in that part of the state wish to have removed. The removal of these toll roads would not benefit anybody outside of the counties interested

In these days of turmoil it is gratifying to know that according to Secretary Daniels, of the American navy, this branch of the government is stronger than ever and that it is fully competent to deal with the navies of the world, even if these should be combined against the United States. Secretary Daniels declares emphatically that the guns now being placed on warships of the United States will "shoot farther, shoot straighter and shoot harder" than those in use by any other nation

The report that Secretary Daniels contemplates strengthening the American navy by buying up some of the old canal boats abandoned when the Pennsylvania canal was gobbled by the Pennsylvania railroad, arming them with the guns captured during the Mexican and Civil wars and using them to patrol the American coasts, that he plans to convert oil tanks used on railroads as torpedo boat destroyers, and that he will run his warships with sails instead of by steam are probaby founded on fiction, but when the United States must depend upon a landlubber to run its navy almost any innovation may be anticipated. The fact of the matter is that the American navy is not as big nor as efficient as it ought to be, and this is due to the Democratic policy of blundering

The country lanes are stained with red
More scarlet than the kiss of frost
And one leads from the fields of dead
Where raging battle lines are tossed
It flees the horror of the plain

Enfolds its path with pitying leaves,
Compassionate the dim woods lean
As the pale moon her magic weaves
Compassionate the gray church waits,
A crypt of peace within her gates

Along the faintly echoing aisles
The stricken lie in silent lines,
Caressingly a woman smiles
Sweet consolation's brimming bowl
She pours for every anguished soul

Who Go to Church?

The facts about church membership are contained in United States census bulletin No 103 and the percentage of church membership in the total population is given for the year 1906 26 years after Kansas has become a prohibition state. According to this tabulation, which is the latest obtainable, the lowest percentage of church membership was in Oklahoma, including Indian Territory, the rate being 18 2. The rate in New York was 41 7, in Pennsylvania, 43, in Illinois, 38 3, in Nebraska, 32 4, in Maine, 29 8 and in Kansas 28 4. Forty three states had a larger percentage of membership than had Kansas

Since this tabulation was made up, two of the four states that had a lower rate of church membership than had Kansas namely Oklahoma and West Virginia have joined the ranks of the prohibition states. Of the six states, therefore having the lowest rate of church membership in the United States four are prohibition states —Royal E Cabell in Leslie's

CHAPTER XVII.

The professor roused himself from what had apparently been a very gloomy reverie.

"Well," he announced, "I must go home. It has been very kind of you, Mr. Quest, to keep me here for so long."

Quest glanced at the clock.

"Don't hurry, Mr. Ashleigh," he said. "We may get some news at any moment. French has a dozen men out on the search and he has promised to ring me up immediately he hears anything."

The professor sighed.

"A man," he declared, "who for twenty years can deceive his master so utterly and completely as Craig has done me, who is capable of such diabolical outrages, and who, when capture stares him in the face, is capable of an escape such as he made today, is outside the laws of probability. Personally, I do not believe that I shall ever again see the [illegible] of my servant, any more than [illegible] you, Quest, will entirely solve [illegible] mystery of these murders and [illegible] theft of the Rheinholdt jewels. What can we do against men who have revolving staircases and trolley-loads of river pirates waiting for them? You may be a scientific criminologist, Quest, but that fellow Craig is a scientific criminal, if ever there was one."

Quest crossed the room towards his cigar cabinet, and opened it. His little

start was apparent to both of them. Lenora laid down the bag which she had just lifted up. The professor leaned forward in his chair.

"What is it, Quest?" he demanded.

Quest stretched out his hand and picked up from the top of the cigars a small black box. He laid it on the table.

"Unless I am very much mistaken," he said, "it is another communication from our mysterious friend."

"Impossible!" the professor exclaimed hoarsely.

"How can he have been here?" Lenora cried.

Quest removed the lid from the box and drew out a circular card. Around the outside edge was a very clever pen and ink sketch of a lifebuoy, and inside the margin were several sentences of clear handwriting. In the middle was the signature "the clenched hands." Quest read the message aloud:

"In the great scheme of things, the Supreme Ruler of the universe divided an inheritance amongst his children. To one he gave power, to another strength, to another beauty, and to his favorite he gave cunning. They all fooled at one another."

"What does it mean?" Lenora [illegible]

"A [illegible]," the professor murmured.

"Anything doing?" he asked.

Quest showed him the card and the sailing list.

The inspector glanced at the clock.

"Then we're got to make tracks," he declared, "and pretty quick, too. She'll be starting from somewhere about number twenty-eight dock, a long way down. Come along, gentlemen."

They hurried out to the automobile and started off for the docks. The latter part of their journey was accomplished under difficulties, for the street was packed with drays and heavy vehicles. They reached dock number twenty-eight at last, however, and hurried through the shed on to the wharf. There were no signs of a steamer there.

"Where's the Durham?" Quest asked one of the carters, who was just getting his team together.

The man pointed out to the middle of river, where a small steamer was lying.

"There she is," he replied. "She'll be off in a few minutes. You'll hear the sirens directly when they begin to move down."

Quest led the way quickly to the edge of the wharf. There was a small tug there, the crew of which were just making her fast for the night.

"Fifty dollars if you'll take us out to the Durham and catch her before she sails," Quest shouted to the man who seemed to be the captain.

They clambered down the iron ladder and jumped on to the deck of the tug. The captain seized the wheel. The two men who formed the crew took off their coats and waistcoats.

"Give it to her, Jim," the former ordered. "Now then, here goes! We'll just miss the ferry."

They swung around and commenced their journey. Quest stood with his watch in his hand. They were getting up the anchor of the Durham and from higher up the river came the screech of steamers beginning to move on their outward way.

"We'll make it all right," the captain assured them.

They were within a hundred yards of the Durham when Quest gave a little exclamation. From the other side of the steamer another tug shot out away, turning back towards New York. Huddled up in the stern, half concealed in a tarpaulin, was a man in a plain black suit. Quest, with a little shout, recognized the man at the helm from his long, brown beard.

"That's one of those fellows who was in the truck," he declared, "and that's Craig in the stern! We've got him this time. Say, captain, it's that tug I want. Never mind about the steamer. Catch it and I'll make it a hundred dollars!"

"We've got her!" the captain exclaimed. "There's the ferry and the first of the steamers coming down in the middle. They'll have to chuck it."

Right ahead of them, blazing with lights, a huge ferry came churning the river up and sending waves in their direction. On the other side, unnaturally large, loomed up the great bows of an ocean-going steamer. The tug was swung round and they ran up alongside. The man with the beard leaned over.

[illegible]

"Say, what's your trouble?" he demanded.

The inspector stepped forward.

"I want that man you've got under the tarpaulin," he announced.

"Say, you ain't the river police?"

"I'm Inspector French from headquarters," was the curt reply. "The sooner you hand him over, the better for you."

"Do you hear that, O'Toole?" the other remarked, turning around. "Get up, you blackguard!"

A man rose from underneath the oilskin. He was wearing Craig's clothes, but his face was the face of a stranger. As quick as lightning Quest swung round in his place.

"He's fooled us again!" he exclaimed. "Head her round, captain—back to the Durham!"

The sailor shook his head.

"We've lost our chance, guvnor," he pointed out. "Look!"

Quest set his teeth and gripped the inspector's arm. The place where the Durham had been anchored was empty. Already, half a mile down the river, with a trail of light behind and her siren shrieking, the Durham was standing out seawards.

Don't Neglect Your Eyes

Your eyes are your main support, therefore they should not be neglected in any way. The following are a few ways by which they are neglected more than any other way.

First You feel that you need glasses for your close work, yet, you neglect getting them examined and fitted with glasses. Another is that the glasses you are now wearing may not be the right focus for your eyes, yet you neglect getting them changed, or often your glasses become broken and you neglect getting them fixed as promptly as you should. Then again so many people are troubled with pain in the region of the eye ball or frequent headache which is very often caused through eye strain. Yet they neglect having them examined and find out whether or not glasses are needed.

Remember by neglect of these minor troubles serious trouble beyond all help often develops.

Therefore don't neglect your eyes, but call at our office Saturday May 8th, and have them examined.

Our examination is free, and make glasses as low as $1.00.

Good Work of Aviators.

In all of his reports General French has laid stress upon the great service rendered by the aviators in ascertaining the moves of the enemy as soon as they start to make them. The reconnoissance work they have performed has been invaluable. According to the official statement of the British war office, their aviators are covering an average of 2,000 miles a day.

YUKON RIVER LITTLE KNOWN

Average American Unfamiliar With the Characteristics of the Great Alaskan Waterway.

The Yukon means so much as a waterway to Alaska that a report by the United States geological survey on its discharge at Eagle and on some of the great river's characteristics have especial interest. The Yukon is the fifth river in size in North America. It drains an area of 330,000 square miles and its length, including the Lewes and Teslin rivers, is 2,700 miles. The Mississippi-Missouri rivers are 6,000 miles long; the Mackenzie, 2,868; Colorado-Green, 2,000, and Ohio-Allegheny, 1,200.

The discharge of the Yukon varies from a maximum of 254,000 cubic feet a second to 10,100 cubic feet, average of 73,200. This discharge is relatively small compared with the average flow of the Mississippi, 695,000; Ohio, 300,000, and Colorado, 23,300. The Nile, with a drainage area of 1,262,000 square miles has an average flow of 116,000 cubic feet a second.

The comparatively small flow in relation to its drainage area is attributed to the fact that the interior of Alaska has the small rainfall characteristic of that portion of the United States that lies between the Rocky mountains and the Sierra Nevada north of the latitude of Salt Lake City.

The Yukon means so much to Alaska and the territory means so much to the United States in gold production and in other latent mineral and other development that the lack of general knowledge regarding its characteristic must be surprising to the sojourner in this country who comes from its banks.—New York

Showing Boys and Girls Their Work May Be Properly Described as the Divine Profession.

"There are no men nor women alive, of too deep visioning, nor of too lustrous a humanity, for the task of showing boys and girls their work. No other art answers so beautifully. This is the intense cultivation of the human spirit. This is world-parenthood, the divine profession.

"I would have my country call upon every man who shows vision and fineness in any work, to serve for an hour or two each day, among the schools of his neighborhood, telling the children the mysteries of his daily task—and watching for his own among them."

"There was an old priest who served men in Siberia. Around him, in that bleak winter land, were the best and worst of the Russian empire. He tended the sick, and prayed with them; brought food, cut wood, procured medicines, watched with the dying, prepared the dead. A certain young Red came out to the colony and observed the priest's manner of life.

"'Father,' he said, finally, 'I should think you would lose your soul in the midst of such misery and evil and darkness—as our life here is made of.'

"The old man leaned back and looked at the ceiling, shutting his eyes.

"'Well, now, that's queer,' he said, presently. 'I had almost forgotten that I had a soul.'"—Will Levington Comfort.

BENEFIT IN WAGGING EARS

Exercise Is Declared by Physicians to Have an Excellent Effect of the Hearing.

You will rarely find that a man who can wag his ears suffers from deafness. The reason for this is very simple. Wagging one's ears exercises them just as much as walking exercises the muscles of the legs. A great deal of deafness is caused by the muscles of the ears becoming stiff and refusing to respond quickly to the sound waves.

Quite a large proportion of children can move their ears, just as they can move the skin on their forehead up and down, but as they grow up they lose their power through want of practice. It is a mistake to let a child lose this power, for it may mean the difference between good and bad hearing in after years.

Dr. M. Fernet, the famous Paris doctor, has even gone so far as to suggest that people should be trained to wag their ears just as they are trained to exercise any other muscles of the body.

National Gas Range Week

The Birthday of the

First Gas Range

FIFTY-ONE Years ago the first Gas Range cooked its first meal.

It didn't look much like the wonderful new gas ranges of 1915. It was clumsy---imperfect---but even at that it quickly proved its superiority over other ways of cooking.

This week is being celebrated all over the country as National Gas Range Week, in honor of this father of all gas ranges.

Right now is the best time to put a shining new Clark Jewel Range in your kitchen.

What is the use of trying to make your old stove last another year when a convenient, perfect "Jewel" will make your kitchen work so much easier---lighten the cooking burden---and give you many more minutes of freedom from household drudgery.

Every Clark Jewel is guaranteed to bake perfectly, and will give you years of perfect service.

Call and let us show you these 1915 Clark Jewel Gas Ranges.
